

SLMC 251: Interpersonal Communication

Interpersonal communication represents the very foundation of human communication. It is the goal of this course to explore and to develop an intellectual and operational understanding of these two disciplines in order to learn ways of communicating effectively in individual, dyadic and group situations. Special attention will be directed to the application of theoretical perspectives to the classroom and small group settings.

Credits: 3

Program:

Strategic, Legal & Management Communication

COURSE DESCRIPTIONS

Essential Learning Outcomes: ELO #4: Intellectual and Practical Skills