

EDUC 311: Special Educ & Classroom Mgmt

Focuses on providing students with knowledge about individuals who possess exceptional learning needs because of their diverse cognitive, behavioral, and linguistic abilities. Candidates will examine the history of special education, legislation, and laws that support the educational rights of individuals with disabilities, their families, and caregivers. In addition, this course offers practical guidance for pre-service teachers to learn and apply classroom and behavior management techniques in both regular and special education settings. Field experiences are required.
