

IDSD 163: Criminal Justice - Designing Equity

Explore criminal justice through the built environment. Address crime prevention, restorative justice, and the design of urban transformations of African American communities through a social equity lens. Learn non-western or historically criminalized marginalized cultures and traditions, how the built environment, and its forms of power shape inequality and understandings of race and identity. Research the power of space, structures of inequality in community development, design, and crime prevention tactics through mixed media and the arts.
